Dave – we never did get a chance to sit down with our attorney to talk about vulnerabilities, but it seems that addressing the components is the most important thing. I think if they do a decent job of addressing the components that this plan can get done. It would probably also address a lot of the public's concerns. I asked that they accomplish this by end of February. Does that seem reasonable given the comments?

This was a review effort that included Jayne and Marty. It was his use of our systems search tools that enabled us to check whether they did or did not discuss important elements. It helps to have young people that are tech savvy around to help with projects like this. They naturally use technology to answer questions, while the old guard will hunt and peck.
